A Survey of Afterschool Programs in Maricopa and Pima Counties

We are proud to announce the release of the Arizona Afterschool Survey Report, 'Young Minds Keep Learning Even After the School Day Ends'.

Conducted and compiled by the Arizona Center for Afterschool Excellence, Valley of the Sun United Way and United Way of Tucson and Southern Arizona in partnership with ASU's Morrison Institute on Public Policy, the Report highlights results of a 2011 survey of 681 afterschool and out-of school time program sites in Maricopa and Pima counties.

35% of programs use a formal assessment tool to evaluate their programs

67% expressed a need to strengthen collaboration with schools

72% of programs selected
"arts and culture" as a primary activity

Contact us at 602.496.3307 or mmcclintock@azafterschool.org if you or your organization would like a presentation or explanation of the key findings and what they mean for Arizona's youth.

We look forward to working with you to build a meaningful afterschool youth development system for all Arizona's youth!

Tucson Mayor Jonathan Rothschild on improving education

Newly elected Tucson Mayor Jonathan Rothschild sees the need for Arizona to pull together to solve its problems. Believing that collaborative approach to improving education is needed, Rothschild intends to work closely with Phoenix Mayor Greg Stanton in addressing educational needs in their cities. In addition to using the bully pulpit of the Mayor's office to support education, Rothschild intends to organize business leaders to make Tucson's case to the state legislature in support of our schools, colleges and universities.

He wrote in his 180-day Work Plan that he will "intend to meet regularly with Superintendents of all Tucson school districts as well as representatives from local colleges and universities, including the Chancellor of Pima Community College and the President of the University of Arizona, to see how the city can help foster excellence in education - both K-12 and beyond."

Rothschild believes afterschool programs are an important component to building safe and healthy communities and are a way of promoting social interaction and engagement among youth. AzCASE looks forward to working with the Rothschild administration in increasing the size and quality of the KIDCO city sponsored afterschool programs.

Share Your Afterschool Stories for a Chance to Win a Kindle Fire!

The Afterschool Alliance wants to hear your success stories! Take a moment to complete this short survey and you will be entered in a drawing to win a Kindle Fire or a $10 iTunes gift certificate. Two Kindle Fire winners will be drawn from the highest quality submissions. 50 iTunes gift certificate winners will be drawn at random. You must send in your submission by January 18, 2012, to be eligible to win a prize.

These examples of success strengthen support for investments in quality programs and provide information critical to improving programs across the country. The Afterschool Alliance is particularly concerned with sharing the successes of programs that have received 21st Century Community Learning Center (CCLC) funds as they work toward increased funding. Please share examples of programs that boost student success in school (e.g., behavior, attendance, grades, academic skills, grade advancement) or provide engaging learning opportunities in areas such as STEM, digital learning, arts, health/nutrition, global learning and physical activity, to name a few. Click here to complete the survey.

The survey is part of a new nationwide campaign by the Afterschool Alliance and Terry Peterson, longtime associate of former U.S. Secretary of Education Dick Riley and now Senior Fellow at the College of Charleston, with support from the Mott Foundation. Selected success stories will receive national attention in print and Web materials and will be shared with Congress. Materials will be sent to you for your own promotional use.

If you have questions or suggestions for this effort, please contact Chris D'Agostino at cdagostino@afterschoolalliance.org or 202.347.2030.

Federal Guidelines Will Affect Expanded Learning Time

How will new federal guidelines affect expanded learning efforts and afterschool programs? Experts tackled that question in a recent webinar hosted by The Forum for Youth Investment about Waiver 11 - a special flexibility option that was included in the U.S. Department of Education's new set of waivers for the No Child Left Behind law. The waiver gives educators more spending flexibility in exchange for clear and rigorous plans to improve educational outcomes. Some leaders wonder if quality afterschool programming will be sacrificed in the name of a slightly longer school day. Arizona has indicated they intend to apply for flexibility. ## Afterschool Evaluation 101: How to Evaluate an Expanded Learning Program

Afterschool Evaluation 101 is a how-to guide for conducting an evaluation. It is designed to help afterschool and out-of-school time (OST) program directors that have little or no evaluation experience develop an evaluation strategy.

The guide will walk you through the early planning stages, help you select the evaluation design and data collection methods that are best suited to your program, and help you analyze the data and present the results.

Evaluation helps your OST program measure how successfully it has been implemented and how well it is achieving its goals. You can do this by comparing the activities you intended to implement and the outcomes you intended to accomplish to the activities you actually implemented and the outcomes you actually achieved.

YMCA's New Healthy Living Standards Gain National Attention

The YMCA recently announced its plan to implement new healthy living standards for the 700,000 kids who participate in early childhood, afterschool and summer learning programs at their roughly 10,000 program sites across the country. The YMCA was one of many organizations and corporations to announce new commitments to reducing childhood obesity at the Partnership for a Healthier America's Building a Healthier Future Summit in Washington, D.C., in November. Eighty-five percent of local YMCA chapters are expected to comply with the voluntary guidelines, which include providing fruits, vegetables and water during snack time, increasing the amount exercise, and limiting screen time.

Do Schools Need a Longer School Day?

A policy brief released last month concluded that contrary to popular perception, most U.S. public schools require at least as much or even more instructional time for students than countries touted for their high performance on international tests, including Finland, Japan and South Korea. There were a lot of caveats in the report but the thrust of the brief was that calls for a longer instructional day for children in the United States to match what students in other countries get may be misguided.

Lots of Exercise May Boost Kids' Grades

A Dutch review of prior research reveals that the more physically active school-aged children are, the better they fare in the classroom. Most of the studies in the review had been conducted in the United States, while one came out of Canada and the other out of South Africa. The findings are published in the January issue of the Archives of Pediatrics & Adolescent Medicine. "We found strong evidence of a significant positive relationship between physical activity and academic performance," the researchers, led by Amika Singh of the Vrije Universiteit University Medical Center at the EMGO Institute for Health and Care Research in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, said in a journal news release.

Afterschool Program at Sunnyslope Elementary School Saved

A $36,000 donation from Circle K and United Cerebral Palsy of Central Arizona will allow the Phoenix Parks and Recreations Department to restore an after-school program at Sunnyslope Elementary School. The program, eliminated two school years ago in light of budget cuts, is the first Phoenix After-school Center program to be funded by a private-sector sponsor, according to recreation coordinator Yvonne Pastor. The city hopes to reopen the program by mid- to late January, she said. Circle K's donation will cover the cost for 70 students to attend. If the program is successful, Circle K may continue its sponsorship for multiple years.

Out-of-School Time Drawing Girls Into STEM

A group of high school girls listen eagerly for their mission: Use the tools on hand to design a self-propelled boat that can cross water with 50 passengers on board. The passengers: pennies. The tools: pipe cleaners, popsicle sticks, and balloons. The water: an inflatable kiddie pool. It's another engineering "design challenge" at Techbridge, an after-school program for girls that encourages interest in STEM-science, technology, engineering, and mathematics-subjects. Close to 30 girls are here this day at Arroyo High School, one of 21 Techbridge sites in California's Bay Area that serve more than 600 elementary and secondary girls in total, close to 90 percent of whom are minority students.

Arizona Grandparent Ambassadors Community Outreach & Advocacy Summit

Sunday, January 29, 2012, 9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

Holiday Inn, 777 North Pinal Avenue Casa Grande, AZ

Presented by Children's Action Alliance, The Community Outreach and Advocacy Summit will provide an opportunity for dialog among grandparents, human services professionals, elected leaders, and government agencies. This is an opportunity to come together to speak up for kids and to formulate an action plan to address the challenges faced by grandparents raising their grandchildren.

Many grandparents face challenges with housing, transportation, child care, after-school care, and health care for themselves and their grandkids. Recent state budget cuts in Arizona have made it harder for grandparents to get basic assistance to keep their grandchildren thriving and their families intact. Now is the time to come together and create a collective voice for the most vulnerable in our communities!

Registration is free but seating is limited. Please RSVP to Elaine Wilder (520) 820-8949 or email: wilder.e@gmail.com

Strengthening Science Education: The Power of More Time to Deepen Inquiry and Engagement

The state of American science education threatens our nation's capacity to remain globally competitive; to confront current and future challenges in energy, public health, and the environment; and to adequately prepare the next generation for success in career and life. Released in November 2011, this report illustrates that improving U.S. student achievement in science requires a more in-depth, multi-layered approach to science instruction that, in turn, requires more time in the school calendar, particularly for high-poverty students.

From Soft Skills to Hard Data: Measuring Youth Program Outcomes

From the Forum for Youth Investment, From Soft Skills to Hard Data: Measuring Youth Program Outcomes reviews eight youth outcome measurement tools that are appropriate for use in afterschool settings. For each tool, it provides sample items and crucial information about usability, cost, and evidence of reliability and validity. The guide can help providers select conceptually grounded, psychometrically sound measures appropriate for programs that serve upper-elementary- through high school-aged youth.

MetLife Issue Brief Shows Afterschool Can Provide Important Outlet For Bullied Middle Schoolers

Bullying is a problem in America's schools. This fact is not groundbreaking news, but a new issue brief by the Afterschool Alliance and MetLife Foundation provides a novel way that schools and communities can help combat bullying: by utilizing quality, effective afterschool programs. The brief entitled "Afterschool: A Strategy for Addressing and Preventing Middle School Bullying" exhibits how afterschool programs that provide access to caring adults and offer a more informal environment that is distinct from the school day allow children to feel safe from peer pressure, build confidence and learn how to deal with bullies.

The Family Engagement for High School Success Toolkit: Planning and implementing an initiative to support the pathway to graduation for at-risk students

The Family Engagement for High School Success Toolkit is designed to support at-risk high school students by engaging families, schools, and the community. Created in a joint effort by United Way Worldwide (UWW) and Harvard Family Research Project (HFRP) as part of the Family Engagement for High School Success (FEHS) initiative, the toolkit has two parts:

- Part 1 focuses on the comprehensive planning that goes into the development of a family engagement initiative.
- Part 2 focuses on the early implementation process.
